ONE-THIRD CUT IN EXPENSE IS ASKED OF BOARD

Supervisors Receive A
Demand From County
Taxpayers' Assn.

The Lee county Board of Supervisors yesterday afternoon discussed a resolution submitted by the Lee County Taxpayers Association which asked a reduction of 33 1-3 per cent in the 1932 taxes in Lee county. Dr. W. F. Aydelotte of this city had been granted permission by Chairman Gilbert P. Finch to appear before the board for 30 minutes to present his arguments at the close of the afternoon session.

The board listened to the reading of reports of various committees and transacted routine business before Chairman Finch called upon Dr. Aydelotte to address the board in behalf of the Taxpayers Association. The speaker gave some idea of the program and plans of the Lee county association and explained the county-wide drive by townships for members which is meeting with excellent success. Palmyra, with a membership of 127 taxpayers, was given as an outstanding illustration of the response with which the program is being received in the various townships of the county. Several townships of the membership rolls were turned over to the supervisors for their inspection, several of which were accompanied by sworn affidavits of the genuineness of the signatures.

Seeks Cooperation
Dr. Aydelotte told the board that the association sought to work and cooperate in a fair and friendly manner in bringing about a tax reduction of one-third, including the reductions already made in salaries. He presented to the clerk, Fred G. Dimick a copy of a resolution which was filed with the board to make the 33 1-3 per cent reduction in taxes and to create a special emergency fund in Lee county, the members of the association further taking a stand as outlined in the resolution to support only such officers of Lee county who stand ready to cooperate and bring about such reductions as was outlined in the instrument, which read as follows:

Text of Resolutions
"We, the Lee County Taxpayers Association, represent to you that an extreme emergency exists; that under present antiquated laws pertaining to taxation we find our property and our homes threatened with confiscation; and that our elected officers, under these laws, are unable to protect us therefrom."
"Therefore, be it resolved that we, the members of the Lee County Taxpayers Association, as a part of an organized plan for the purpose of stabilizing government, shall positively support only such candidates, appropriation and expenditures of public money as agree and provide for at least one-third reduction of usual salary or compensation for said officer, or officers, or other regular needs of government. Said savings to be set aside and placed in regular county, township, city village and school district, to be known as the Lee County Taxpayers Association fund. Said fund to be credited to said county, township, city village and school district, respectively by the officers thereof."
"Further, be it resolved, that members of the said County Taxpayers Association pledge ourselves positively to recommend, during the period of this depression, and to vote for and support only such candidates whose public acts as conform in spirit and in principle to the purposes expressed in this resolution."
"And finally, be it resolved that said candidates prove their good faith as competent officers meriting public support in an emergency of this severity by signing this resolution on or before Sept. 21, 1932."

Signed By Officers
The resolution was signed by members of the board of directors of the Taxpayers Association as president; R. A. Rodesch, vice president; Anson Rosenkrans, vice president; E. D. Countyman, vice president; X. F. Gehant, secretary and treasurer; Henry Gehant, Cora Brauer, assistant secretary, Frank C. Sproul, chairman of economic committee and John R. Oester, chairman of the membership committee.

Members of the board and the speaker engaged in a discussion of certain matters of county expense until almost 5 o'clock, when the resolution was ordered tabled until today's session when it was to be further discussed and some definite action taken.

Delay Consideration
At the close of the morning session today the supervisors voted to table the proposed resolution until this afternoon for the further consideration of the board members. It was also the opinion of the board that the communication be not included as a part of the official proceedings of that body in its session yesterday afternoon.

At this morning's session, the board listened to the reading of reports of various committees. Supervisor Ortigues of the judiciary committee spoke briefly to the board explaining several applications.

Science Backs
Spider In Life
And Death Battle

St. Charles, Ill., Sept. 15.—(AP)—Science is predicting victory for a common black spider in its long fight with a ten-inch garter snake, around which it spun its web twenty-four days ago.

Suspended in the air, its head enmeshed in a strong silken rope, the snake began its twenty-fifth day of struggle to disengage itself, but, in the opinion of Walter Necker of the Field Museum of Natural History, there is no chance to escape.

Under a magnifying glass the reptile was seen to be as securely bound as though it were held in chains of iron.

"I know of one case in which a rattlesnake lived for months without food or water, but I would not give this small fellow more than a month to live under the same conditions," Necker said after looking at the life-and-death struggle nature is staging in a city pump house.

Snake Has Partisans
But the snake was not without its partisans. Two fashionably dressed women, among the many attracted to the scene of the fight, screamed yesterday as they watched the spider toss additional silken loops around the head of its victim. At the same time an investigator for the Illinois Humane Society asked Mayor I. G. Langum to put an end to the struggle.

Mayor Langum, who is betting on the spider, refused to interfere.

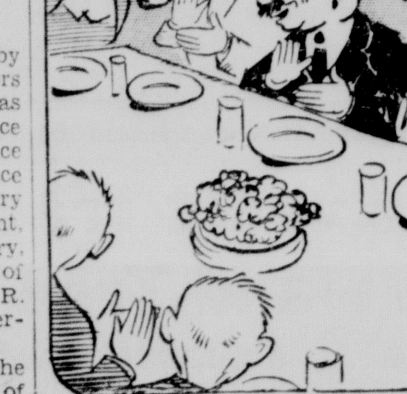

There appears to be but one chance, in the belief of the experts, that the mayor may lose, in which case the credit won't go to the snake, but to another spider. They agree that that species is a male belonging to that species which sometimes is killed by the female of its own kind.

PROSECUTOR TO PROBE INSULL
FIRM DEALINGS

Investigation Result Of Much Clamor By the Public He Says

Chicago, Sept. 15.—(AP)—A deficit of $526,091 exclusive of the capital stock of the Mississippi Valley Utilities Investment Company, was reported to Federal Court today by the receiver, Eugene V. R. Thayer.

The deficit including the company's stock was placed at $28,392,665.

This second audit of an Insull utility securities company to reach the courts this week was made public as State's Attorney John A. Swanson announced the appointment of four assistant prosecutors to investigate the collapse of the Insull investment fabric.

Two days ago auditors reported a loss of 226 million dollars for the Insull Utility Investments, Inc., and tomorrow the receivers of the Middle West Utilities Company, mentioned advances of $66,000 to Martin J. Insull, younger brother of Samuel Insull, Sr., and "junior partner" in the Insull utilities empire. The report observed that these advances were "collateralized by securities of little value."

The auditors also drew attention to advances made to E. V. Graham, a former Vice President of Mississippi Valley, and others, some secured by insurance policies. Details were not given, the auditors stating that further illumination would be given in subsequent reports.

The total due on notes from officers and other individuals was placed at $261,104. All but two were secured by collateral, of which the value at present market prices was not made known.

To Confer With Judge
Making public announcement of his determination to investigate the Insull debacle because of complaints and rumors, State's Attorney Swanson asked for a conference with U. S. District Judge Walter C. Lindley, who has jurisdiction over receiverships. He said he would ask access to the reports of the various companies.

The Mississippi Valley audit listed assets at $49,595,732 of which only $9,489 was cash. Besides the 28 million dollar deficit there was a deficiency federal income tax for 1926 to 1929 amounting to $742,075 to be paid, exclusive of interest and penalty.

Among the assets was an item of $834,985 comprising securities of the Utility Security Company, another Insull subsidiary, marked "no value."

Chicago, Sept. 15.—(AP)—State's Attorney John A. Swanson said today he has started an investigation into the affairs of the Public Utility corporations formerly controlled by Samuel Insull.

Swanson said he was starting a series of conferences with members of his staff. He said he planned to ask receivers of the Insull concerns to furnish reports of their operations previous to last June when Insull abdicated as head of the vast utilities empire.

"There is much public clamor and many insinuations regarding failure of the Insull companies," Swanson said. "We intend to make a thorough investigation, with the view of either absolving officers of the concerns or instituting prosecution."

The Cook county Prosecutor said he had asked Assistant State's Attorney Euclid Taylor, extradition expert, to review treaties with Canada.

Through the activities of the two highway officers "Smith" was arrested in Moline Tuesday night and was taken to Galena to await extradition proceedings. His arrest resulted in the kidnap gang releasing their prisoner yesterday morning at Monticello, Ia., forty miles west of Dubuque.

Rome-Bound Plane Feared Lost

Rome, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Every searching agency under the control of the Italian government was set to work today to find the missing monoplane "American Nurse" which had disappeared on a non-stop flight from New York to Rome.

Due here last midnight with her crew of two men and a woman, there was no report of the plane after 11:50 A. M. yesterday when a steamer reported sighting it 400 miles off the coast of Ireland.

As soon as he was certain that the fuel must be exhausted even if there had been no accident, General Italo Balbo, the Minister for Air, ordered all pilots, military and civil, on land and sea, to search for signs of the plane or for wreckage. Forestry workers, lighthouse keepers, warships and merchantmen, as well as the entire national police force were instructed to be vigilant.

Those aboard are William Ulbrich, pilot, of Mineola, N. Y.,

Miss Edna Newcomer, 28-year-old undergraduate nurse of Williamsport, Pa., and Dr. Leon M. Picculli of Yonkers, N. Y., the commander of the expedition.

Picketing Is Again
Reported Around
Sioux City

Sioux City, Iowa, Sept. 15.—(AP) After a week of comparative quiet, farm strike hostilities flared up again here today when pickets on highway No. 20, east of the city limits, caused such serious interference with traffic that police arrested more than twenty of the strikers.

Deputy Sheriffs were called to the picket line about 5 o'clock this morning and were said to have succeeded in escorting five truck loads of livestock through the lines. They then returned to the lines when they were informed that more blockade runners were expected.

As the trucks arrived on the scene, the pickets blocked the highway with logs, spiked threshing machine belts and other obstructions and refused to permit any traffic to pass, regardless of the nature of the cargo, officers said.

The deputies called on the city police department for aid and Thomas H. McBride, Commissioner of Public Safety, sent a squad of uniformed officers to the scene.

The policemen were deputized by the Sheriff and they proceeded at once to chase the pickets from the highways while the Deputy Sheriffs cleared the road of obstructions.

"LET NO ONE GO HUNGRY" CHARGE
OF MR. HOOVER

President Pleads For Unselfish Devotion To Relief Work

Washington, Sept. 15.—(AP)—President Hoover today charged a distinguished gathering of relief workers to see that "no man, woman or child shall go hungry or unsheltered through the approaching winter."

In reply, Newton D. Baker, chairman of the National Citizens' Committee of the Welfare and Relief Mobilization of 1932, told the Chief Executive he felt sure there would be added to federal contributions already made, "a devotion of every private resource."

The President and Baker spoke from a low platform erected on the south lawn of the White House. Under spreading trees facing the platform were rows of temporary seats, forming an impromptu amphitheater in which sat relief and welfare workers gathered from all parts of the country at the President's behest. They composed the National Citizens' Committee sponsoring Welfare and Relief Mobilization.

Both Mr. Hoover and Baker were applauded as they walked down the gravel path from the executive offices to the speaking platform.

Mr. Hoover's urging that none should go hungry or unsheltered was made by him as the first item of a four-point program.

The others were that benevolent relief agencies be "maintained in full strength," that the "bed rock principle of our liberties be sustained by full mobilization of individual and local resources and that we maintain the spiritual impulses in our people for generous giving and generous service."

After considerable applause at the conclusion of the President's and Baker's addresses, the meeting was adjourned until afternoon.

APPEALS TO PEOPLE
Appealing to the American people to support generously private relief agencies, Hoover outlined four salient points in caring for the nation's needy.

They were, first, "to see that no man, woman or child shall go hungry or unsheltered through the approaching winter."

Second, "to see that our great benevolent agencies for character building, for hospitalization, for care of children and all their vast number of agencies of voluntary service for the less fortunate are maintained in full strength."

Third, "to maintain the bedrock principle of our liberties by the full mobilization of individual and local resources and responsibilities."

Fourth, "that we maintain the spiritual impulses in our people for generous giving and generous service—in the spirit, that each is his brother's keeper."

Hope For Future
"This, I trust," Mr. Hoover said, "is the last winter of this great calamity. Yet despite a dawning hope upon the horizon, individual need in the meantime may be greater than before."

He asserted, however, that although greater difficulty may be encountered this year in obtaining private subscriptions, he was "confident that you will succeed."

"Our peoples are the most generous of all peoples," he said.

Praising the previous generous responses to local relief societies, the President outlined federal relief projects—the $30,000,000 fund and mammoth building programs He described Red Cross distribution of government wheat and cotton and efforts to spread employment.

"With these back logs behind your efforts and those of local authorities," Mr. Hoover asserted, "we must make sure that no American will this winter go hungry or cold."

Based on Service
These programs of the government are based upon the continuation of your services. They presuppose adequate neighborhood support to your efforts, which still comprise a large part of our reliance. They presuppose that the thousands of agencies which in normal times carry the load of distress shall function this winter to their utmost capacity. Let no man believe, because we have summoned the power of government to these ends, that it can replace your efforts."

Mr. Baker, replying to Mr. Hoover said that federal and state relief provisions are "helpful but not enough."

Needs Private Devotion
"To all these public recognitions," he said, "there must be added a devotion of every private resource both to extend the rescue purely for relief and to preserve and intensify the curative administrations of welfare and character building agencies which are more critically needed now than at any other time."

Burning Bush—Undset
All of the characters will be remembered from "Wild Orchid". Here is a family of Norwegians in neutral territory during the closing years of the war, a family whose morals and finances are directly affected by that war, and who, nevertheless, live as if there were no outside disturbance. The story is chiefly concerned with Paul and his young wife Bjord, whose first quarrel was recorded in "Wild Orchid".

Family Circle—Mauoris
The story tells of the life of Denise Herpain, one of three daughters in a French family. At an early age Denise is disillusioned by her mother's unfaithfulness to her father. The taint of scandal preys on the mind of the growing girl, makes her bitter toward her mother, and antagonistic toward marriage. The family circle is completed when the daughter's life runs along the same grooves as the mother's.

Carbon Copies—Cohen
Here are side-splitting stories of the colored folk, viewed at its gayest and best, filled with laughter and pomp, ambition and chaos described with Mr. Cohen's infectious good humor. The author is without question the foremost writer of Negro stories living today.

In the early fall the housewife is filled with new ambitions, and seeks information and advice on home furnishings, furniture arrangements, color schemes, and details on drapery hangings. The various books on this subject point out that it is unnecessary to discard the present furniture to give rooms a new appearance. New interesting furniture arrangements, the addition of some single piece and the change in the color scheme goes a long way in making a house.

Halo is married to a cold, vain, and faithless husband and knows that her husband has become a mockery, but family tradition says that divorce is unbecoming. A NEW SAGA OF THE VIKINGS.

An American college professor recently finished more than a decade's study of some odd-looking inscriptions on a stone found in Minnesota and announced that his researches proved that a band of Viking adventurers had visited Minnesota as long ago as 1362.

This theory had been put forward before, and had been sharply criticized by authorities on Viking history; but the professor believes he has removed the earlier objections to its acceptance, and those of us who know nothing whatever about it will be inclined to hope that he is right. The story opens such a fascinating vista for imaginative minds.

According to the story, a band of Vikings was sent from Europe in the middle of the 14th century to relieve a hard-pressed Greenland settlement. Finding the settlement deserted, the band continued on its way, got into Hudson Bay, and eventually made its way up a chain of lakes and rivers into what is now Minnesota.

Wandering overland, far from its boats, part of the band was ambushed and slain by Indians. The survivors inscribed the story on a stone and then vanished, and to this day no man knows what became of them.

Here, quite clearly, is one of the most romantic of all exploration stories; and we hope that it is true, not because it makes any difference, but because it is all too good a story to lose.

It is hard for us today to realize the loneliness and isolation that must have attended the Viking band. Lost in Minnesota 600 years ago, they were infinitely farther from home and civilization than any explorers could possibly get today. The land ahead of them was more completely unknown than any land white men have ventured into for 300 years. Surely, if ever there were stout-hearted men, they were in this group of Vikings.

And the finish of it all? Darkness and mystery which can never be dispelled. Somewhere, somehow, those Vikings came to the end of the road. Starvation, or roving Indians, or sickness finished them off, and we shall never know just what happened.

But it is hard even to think of it without feeling the pulse quicken.

SCHOOL DAYS—THEN AND NOW.

The fall of the year is just about at hand, and all across the country a good many millions of school children have huddled back to school; and the thought that strikes an observing adult with melancholy force is that they do not seem to go back quite as reluctantly as the children of a generation ago went.

Of course, it is a tradition that children find school odious and welcome such catastrophes as fires, epidemics and tornadoes which create unexpected periods of idleness; but the tradition, really, isn't nearly as true now as it used to be.

Schools are conducted differently than they used to be. More effort is taken to awaken the child's interest. He is likely to get a clearer notion of what it is all about, and to discover that the business of acquiring knowledge can actually be a good deal of fun.

THOSE WESTERN TOURIST CAMPS.

One of the things that make a returning automobile tourist pause and reflect is the contrast between tourist camps in the western part of the United States with those in the east.

In the east the tourist camp is apt to be rather depressing. It is frequently to be found adjacent to some farmyard, which pleases neither the eye nor the nose. Its cabins are box-like, poorly ventilated, unattractive. It is a place to stay overnight, but little more.

But in the west one finds tourist camps that invite one to linger. If one has a tent, there is apt to be a place for it by a cool stream. If one wants a cabin, one gets all the comforts of home. The camp is not merely a stopping place; very often it is a vacation spot as well.

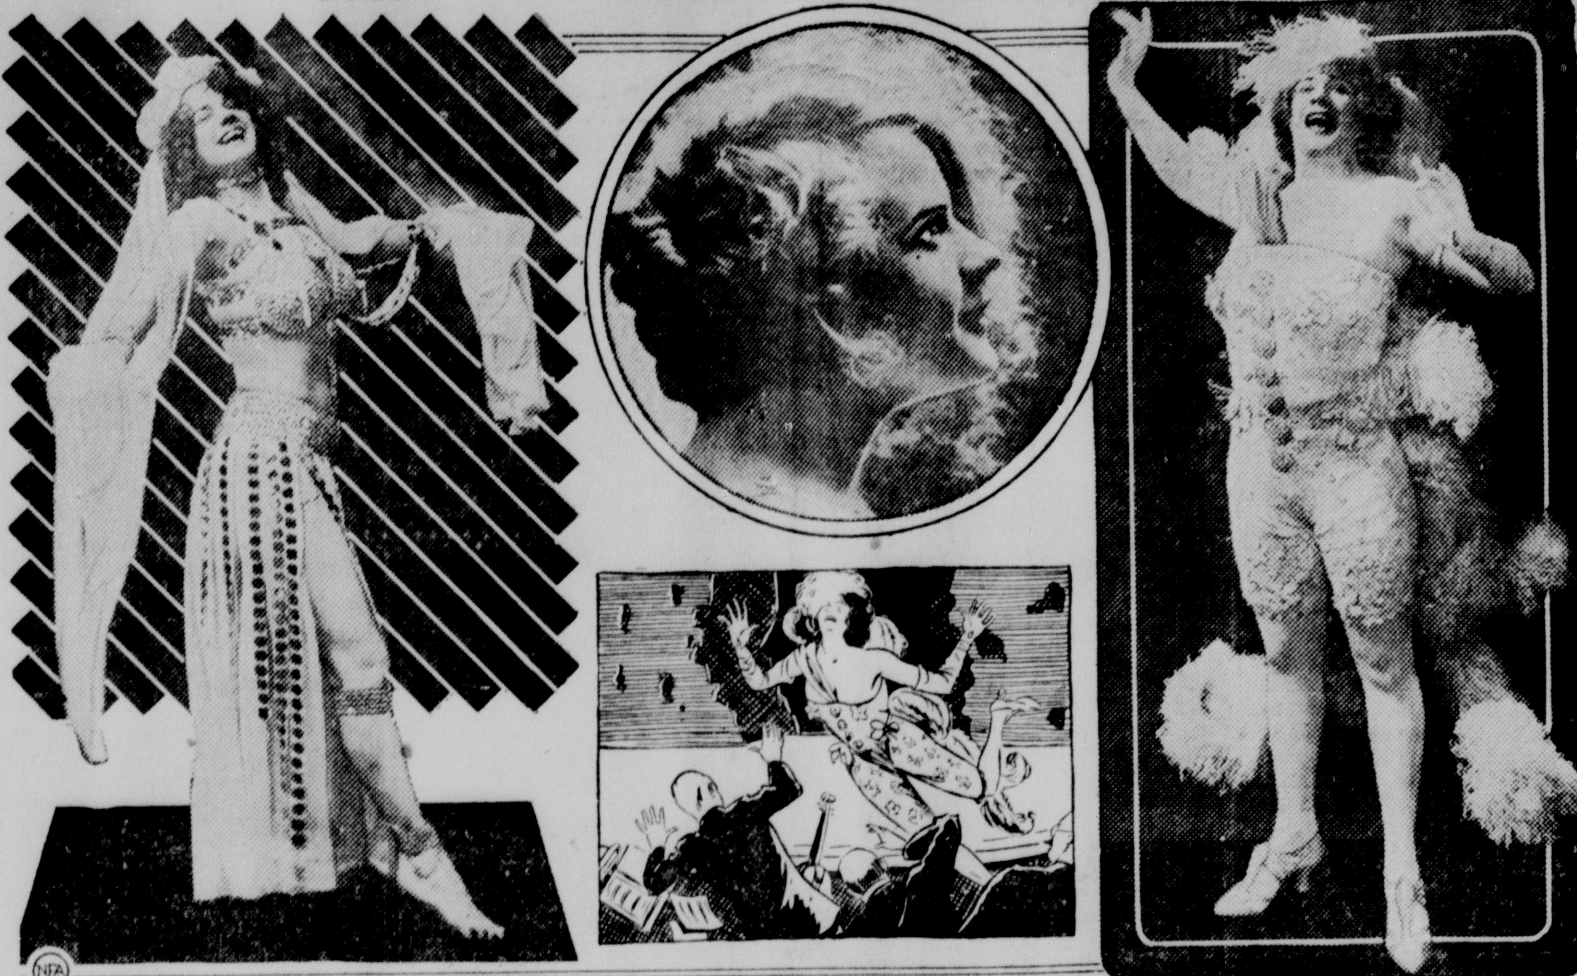

In the matter of how to accommodate tourists the east could learn a good deal from the western states.

If I were 20 years younger and confronted with this crisis I would try very hard to continue my education... because in this new world which will emerge from this crisis there will be a demand for greater skill, better education and broader understanding.—Glenn Frank, president University of Wisconsin.

The principal reason why the federal government was given exclusive jurisdiction over the capital city was to enable it to preserve order at the seat of government and protect the Congress and other public officials from unlawful interference.—Attorney General Mitchell.

The government is spending millions of dollars enforcing prohibition and loaning millions to grape growers so more work can be provided prohibition agents.—Phil S. Hanna, editor Chicago Journal of Commerce.

REFRAIN OF 'I DON'T CARE' HAUNTED THE HECTIC STAGE CAREER OF EVA TANGUAY

Eva Tanguay shocked them with her "Salome" (at left) thrilled them with the fantastic costumes (as at right) in which she sang her "I Don't Care" song, and sheldom was pictured in the demure pose in which you see her (in center) in a youthful portrait. Even when her vision had so faded that she one night fell from the stage in the orchestra pit, her "public" still was demanding that she continue to be the mad, eccentric character she had created.

A BOOK A DAY

SUSPECTED AS CROOK, SOLVES DARK MYSTERY

"The Red Castle Mystery", by H. C. Bailey, brings back to us one of the most pleasing of all fictional detectives—Josh Clunk, the shady criminal lawyer of London, who sucks lemon drops, sings hymns, disseminates an atmosphere of dreadful villainy and solves the most fiendish mysteries.

In this story Mr. Clunk goes to call on a client—a "fence" for the London underworld—and finds him murdered. That wouldn't be so strange, if the murdered chap didn't have a bottle of leeches and a book on ancient religious lying on his desk at the moment, and it all sets Mr. Clunk thinking.

The upshot is that he goes off to the vicinity of Luel Castle and thwarts the horrible designs of a gang of blackmailers on the life of the Earl of Luel, aged 10—not however, without finding that Scotland Yard was convinced that he himself was at the bottom of everything.

This is a first-rate mystery yarn, and you'd better put it up at the head of the list. Mr. Bailey's most famous character, of course, is Regie Fortune, but Mr. Clunk seems to be much more engaging. The way in which he constantly manages to stand with one foot on the side of law and order and the other in the underworld is especially pleasing, and there are moments in which you find yourself wondering if maybe Mr. Clunk isn't the arch-villain of the piece after all.

THE FALL OF CONSTANTINOPLE

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by Thomas Webb... inspired by the savage slaughter of 5000 Christian defenders—at the hands of the vengeful, barbaric horde of 250,000 men under the ruthless Mohammed II—1453!

—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes

They are not present in Luckies ... the mildest cigarette you ever smoked

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

"It's toasted"
That package of mild Luckies

"If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse-trap than his neighbor, tho he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door."—RALPH WALDO EMERSON.
Does not this explain the world-wide acceptance and approval of Lucky Strike?

Not only exponents of political contacts and reactions, but also purely scientific observers are constantly writing and speaking of the differences between the characteristics of various nations and races. Indeed these differences must always be of interest and must account for a good deal of activities and animosities just as the differences between individuals form an everlasting and interesting topic of conversation and provide so much of the salt of life.

For all this, and taking the broadest view, the differences in mental nature are strangely small when considering the physical differences in mental nature are strangely small when considering the physical differences, and the truly wonderful thing is the sameness rather than the variation in the various features of human nature of the races of the world.

A curious fact is that experts seem inclined to reveal what they believe to be special characteristics of the subject of their choice, but which very often turn out to be not special but merely human characteristics.

But the more we read experts' descriptions of the character of particular people the more we are sure that all are similar and differences are a matter of intensification, sublimation and environment.

ST. JAMES

By Harriet L. Hardy
St. James — There has been much uncertainty lately in regard to the bus situation at Amboy Township High School.

For the past few years the students transportation was paid out of the taxes for the non-high school district. At the last session of our State Legislature a law was passed making it unlawful for the non-high board to levy a tax and to use the money to pay this transportation charge without a majority vote of the people living in the non-high district.

It is hoped that the non-high district will call an election to vote whether or not to have the non-high district pay this tax, but if they do not it is the action of the Amboy Township high school board that a charge of ten cents per day per pupil be made starting September 19, 1932.

THE PINE TREE
I KNOW a hill where a pine tree stands.
A Norway pine from storm-swept lands.
With sturdy branches stretched to the wind
And ballast roots, all intertwined.
And a heart that it lifted when storms sweep past
And the sky is black and overcast.

For it loves life best when the clouds hang low
And it swings with its branches, to and fro.
For it fears no wind, no storm that blows,
Not the pelt of hail, nor the winter snows.
For the pine tree's heart is keyed to the sky.
And strong-breasted birds with their wheeling cry!
—Emily C. Sowerby.

When Children Want Everything

Children are naturally acquisitive. They want everything they see.

This is why little children are hard to shop with.

It is torture to a child to be taken to a toy shop and not be allowed to touch anything.

A week or so ago I went to a toy department to buy something for a baby I know. I was amazed to find the stock a veritable mine of everything, for in the month August, toys are things few people concentrate upon. Snow and toy shops go together.

To my amazement there were almost as many children there with their parents as one would expect to find the week before Christmas.

To add to my astonishment the children were using the toys and nobody was saying a word. Not a clerk was frowning. The floor man seemed to be absolutely unconcerned. Children were riding tricycles and kiddy cars and trying out scooters up and down aisles, all absolutely unmolested. A little girl was sliding down a board and a couple of tots were on a see-saw. In an awning-covered sandpile some blocks were scattered about and a year-old baby was trying to pile them up.

I said to the saleswoman who was waiting on me, "In the old days children were not allowed to touch things. What's happened?"

"We think it pays," she said.

"Children see things and then coax till they get them. Is that it?"

"Yes, I guess that's about it. Then children in the store with their mothers ask to come up here and it brings people in. We don't have much broken. Of course there are some things we can't let them have. All these big things on the floor are samples. They stand a lot of using."

"Good salesmanship," I replied, watching a small Indian backing out of a canvas wigwam.

"You don't allow children here without an adult along, I suppose."

"Well, we don't have many that way. Sometimes older children come in alone but we don't say anything."

"Do you know"—a bright idea struck me—"I believe it would pay to make a regular parking place for children in one corner, and have a couple of girls to keep an eye on them."

"The store did try a sort of day nursery on the third floor one time but it didn't work out."

"I know," I nodded. "A lot of stores tried that, but there is something magic about a toy department that is different. I don't mean babies exactly, but it would help hundreds of mothers of three to six-year-old children to go shopping who have no way to leave them. When they take them along the children get tired and cross and want everything they see. Women would rather stay at home."

"There was a man in here the other day, some store official, who had an idea like that," she said.

"So we may see future toy departments doing other work besides mere selling."

But speaking of children who coax—we must not think our own are the only ones who want things when they go on a shopping trip. They are just like us only they express themselves.

Their reason soon comes to their rescue and they get past that stage. They are still acquisitive but learning to control desire.

Yet I am sure many mothers would hail with delight some new plan to relieve them of the small fry when shopping.

RUSSIA EDUCATES WOMEN.

That there is less selfishness in Russia than anywhere else in the world is the opinion of Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman, the president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, who has just returned from Russia.

Mrs. Bowman and a group of other women went to Russia to make a study of women and their progress under the Soviet government. They believe that the educational facilities now provided in Russia will promote women's freedom, as the 80 per cent literacy quota for which Russia was formerly noted centered among women.

Mrs. Bowman operates an advertising agency, and is a partner in a tobacco supplies industry.

Hints for Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

To make boiled starch allow a half cupful of the dry starch to a quart of boiling water. First wet the starch with a little cold water, then pour the boiling water on it, stirring all the while. Boil for from thirty minutes to an hour. Then, just before taking it from the fire, stir in a teaspoonful of granulated sugar.

To set the color in gingham, etc., soak the garment for an hour before washing, in a brine of cold water and ordinary table salt. The addition of a tablespoon of powdered alum dissolved in boiling water is also helpful.

IMMUNIZING INFANTS

In order that the fullest benefit might be derived from the immunizing of infants against diphtheria, it is essential that the treatment be applied in the earliest years of life.

By means of the Shick test, which determines the capacity of the body to neutralize the toxin of the diphtheria bacillus, it has been shown that this immunity in the infants lasts for about three months and then declines until about six months of age, when most infants show a loss of their preventive immunity.

A few infants hold on to their immunity for as long as three years. It would appear, therefore, that at about nine months of age the average child is both ready for and requires immunization against diphtheria.

These studies have brought forth the interesting fact that when certain infants are given immunization treatment with toxin-antitoxin or toxoid, their reaction is not as good as is desirable.

This is particularly the case in children who retain the immunity with which they are born.

It appears, paradoxical, yet it seems that because of this inherent immunity the body does not react as strongly to the immunization treatment.

In the light of this, it is recommended that after the child has been immunized it should be tested after a period of time with the Shick test, to determine whether the treatment was fully effective.

age child is both ready for and requires immunization against diphtheria.

These studies have brought forth the interesting fact that when certain infants are given immunization treatment with toxin-antitoxin or toxoid, their reaction is not as good as is desirable.

This is particularly the case in children who retain the immunity with which they are born.

It appears, paradoxical, yet it seems that because of this inherent immunity the body does not react as strongly to the immunization treatment.

In the light of this, it is recommended that after the child has been immunized it should be tested after a period of time with the Shick test, to determine whether the treatment was fully effective.

GRIMM REFUSES TO WORRY; SAYS CUBS ARE KEYED

Team Backs A Little Bit Closer To Rag As Pirates Lose

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer

As the Chicago Cubs continue to back in a little closer to the National League flag day by day, gradually winning the thing by default, so to speak, their manager is perfectly satisfied with their conduct and steadfastly refuses "to view with alarm."

Charlie Grimm wants it that way. Not that he wouldn't like to win every day. He's in their fighting on every pitched ball, but he isn't in any great hurry to sew up the pennant. He wants his team to remain keyed up as long as possible, doesn't want them to have an extended "let-down" before they meet the Yankees in the world series.

"I believe it's better for a club to keep on its toes right up to the series," he said. "Those Yankees, now, have nothing to do for a couple of weeks except play out their schedule, and it might be hard for them to get back that keen edge they had while they were winning the flag."

Cubs Pirates Lost

The Little Bears lost to the New York Giants yesterday, 4 to 3, when Freddie Lindstrom hit a home run in the 10th inning, but it didn't damage their status any to speak of, as the Pittsburgh Pirates were dropping another game to Boston, 5 to 2. The Cubs thus remained 5½ games in front with 11 games to play, making it possible for them to clinch the title with seven more wins. A triple play, started by Bill Urbanski, enlivened the Braves' victory over Pittsburgh.

Brooklyn climbed within 2½ games of second place by taking the St. Louis Cardinals again, 3 to 1, behind Van Mungo's steady curving. The Phillies subdued Cincinnati, 4 to 1, as big Roy Hansen limited the Reds to four hits.

Some of the Yankee veterans look a well-earned rest, but the "jays" were able to beat the Chicago White Sox, 3 to 2. Walter Brown, making only his second start of the year for the champions, allowed but six hits until the ninth inning. Detroit wheeled four Washington pitchers to win an 8 to 3 verdict.

Jimmie Dykes' home run with two out and the bases loaded in the ninth round set off an eight-run rally that saw the Athletics submerge St. Louis, 13 to 6. Mel Harder kept seven hits scattered in pitching Cleveland to a 9 to 0 win over the Red Sox.

City Dudes Copped Final Series Game

The City Dudes baseball team easily decided the championship series last evening, retaining the title by defeating Jack Doyle's Terrors by a score of 11 to 2 at the Independent field. The game closed a five game series which was played for the city milk fund. The proceeds were turned over to be used in purchasing milk for worthy and needy children. Barefield pitched for the Terrors and was bumped for 11 hits, which coupled with costly errors yielded as many runs. Segner held the Terrors' hits to seven and the Terrors scored one run in each the fourth and fifth innings for their total of two.

85 CANDIDATES FOR DIXON HIGH TEAM REPORTED

Local Gridiron Season Starts With Amboy Saturday, 24th.

By DON HILLIKER
Preparations for meeting Amboy a week from Saturday to open the 1932 football season are in full swing at the local high school. Eighty-five suits have been issued to the following: seniors, 27; juniors, 20; sophomores, 14; freshmen, 24.

Scrimmage sessions are now a part of the daily workout along with the calisthenics and other drills.

Last year the Dixon crew took the North Central Illinois Conference title by winning all four of its league engagements. Besides the conference battles, the boys won over Savanna and annexed the annual Turkey Day game with Sterling. In the first two games of the 1931 schedule Amboy and Rock Falls held the champions to scoreless ties after which the six consecutive wins were registered. The only opposition able to score against Dixon was DeKalb, which team was defeated 12-6.

After the Rock River Conference championship in 1925 Dixon high's football victories were few and far between for three years. Indications after last year's crown lead to another good year. Eight lettermen are back for their final fling on the prep gridiron. At the center of the line are Capt. Crabtree, F. Kennedy and Bates. Lerdahl returns to his tackle post with Strong to take care of an end. In the backfield, Coach Lindell has Fordham and Lightner as mainstays.

A large number of favorable candidates have been undergoing observation in the attempt to fill the gaps left by ex-Capt. Jimmy Wolfe, Elwood McReynolds and Ray Daniels stars of the 1931 pennant winners. In the ball-carrying ranks besides the vets are Cook, Kennedy, Henry Boyer, C. Daniels, N. Whitebread, Smith, Bellows, Tilton, Westberg, Schwab, Withers, Underwood and Muzzey. Those looking for the jobs in the line are Beach, Cinnamon, Fleming, Mossholder, Knapp, L. Whitebread, Knapp, Kline, Trotter, Weidman, Blass, Lund, Reese, Randall, Young, Travis, Quick, Barnhart, Wirth.

WORLD SERIES CLOSEUPS

GUY BUSH

Chicago bought him, but Guy Terrell "Nig" Bush, one of the first three ranking pitchers of the Chicago Cubs, was so afraid of the much publicized sinful ways of the Windy City that he didn't report for more than six weeks after the purchase.

Bush was at Greenville in the Cotton States League when he attracted the attention of Jack Doyle, Cub scout, after pitching a double-header against Vicksburg and winning both games by scores of 4-0.

Guy was then only 20 years old, and fresh from his father's cotton plantation near Aberdeen, Miss. He was a bit afraid of Chicago and its gangsters, so when the offer came to go up in 1923, he failed to show up. When the Cotton States League folded up, however, he joined a team in the Kitty League under an assumed name. However he got in touch with the Cubs in September, tightened his belt, held his breath and joined them.

His first baptism under fire came shortly after in a game with the Giants. He was sent in in the ninth inning with the bases full, the score 8 to 1, in favor of the Giants and George Kelly, who had made three homers in succession and a triple, at bat.

No. Guy didn't pull the hero stunt. When he finally got the ball over, George smacked out a clean single.

Bush differs from other Cub pitchers in that he is thin and frail. His 165 pounds are spread out over a frame that goes up six feet in the air. He is a right-hander when he pitches, but bats left.

With the exception of a short time in 1924, when he was sent to Wichita Falls, Bush has been with the Cubs ever since that year. His best year was in 1929, when he won 18 and lost 7.

He had the distinction in the world series of that year, of being the first pitcher in three years to stop the rampant American Leaguers from running away with the series in successive games.

FRANK CROSETTI

Not yet a star, but soon. That's what they're saying of Frank Crosetti, Yankee shortstop. And since it is customary for shortstops to play the hero role in world series, Frankie may be only a few days away from his goal.

Mark Koenig batted 500 to steal batting honors from his more illustrious team mates as the Yankees beat the Pirates four straight in the 1927 world series. Two years later, Joe Boley's robbery infield disheartened the Cub hitters and the Cub hitters and the Athletics won the classic. In 1930, it was Charley Gehringer and Crosetti who did the honors. Pepper Martin didn't take last year were picked up by Dix Williams, who gobbled up 30 chances afield without an error and batted well over .300 for the Athletics.

Thus, if custom is to be continued in the 1932 world series, Crosetti may have to provide the fireworks. Many critics believe he is capable of it.

When Tony Lazzeri moved eastward six years ago to become a major league star, a little Italian-American kid in San Francisco resolved to follow him. Lazzeri was Crosetti's idol. Frankie dreamed that some day he and Tony would play side by side.

Early this spring, it appeared that the dream would never come true. Lazzeri was up for trade. If Crosetti made good it seemed certain Tony would have to go.

GRID PRACTICE ORDER OF DAY IN CONFERENCE

Prospects For Hard Race In Big Ten Conference

Chicago, Sept. 15 —(AP)—Football started flying over the Big Ten horizon today with championship hopes soaring at Michigan, Purdue, Northwestern, Ohio State and Minnesota.

Upwards of 600 candidates and three new coaches were in the first roll call for what promised to be one of the closest championship campaigns of the years.

Michigan, a share holder in the 1931 championship with Northwestern and Purdue, probably stood out as the most formidable favorite in the early calculations.

With 55 candidates and a good collection of veterans, Coach Harry Kipke admitted he expected to have one of his best teams. His problems were the guard and tackle positions, left open by graduation, but he had a flock of stars and good sophomores on the job.

The largest turn-out of the opening day of drilling was anticipated at Purdue, with 82 candidates. Although minus such stars of a year ago as Purvis, White, Risk and Yunevich, Coach Noble Kizer had a backfield second to none in the conference in ground gaining ability. His chief worry was a hard schedule, starting on October 1, against Kansas State.

Ohio State with 80 candidates of great promise, ranked second in numerical advantage in the first days expected turn-out. Illinois planned on 75, Wisconsin, 50, Indiana 50, Northwestern 55, Iowa 55 and Chicago, marshalled by its "Grand Old Man," Amos Alonzo Stagg, a small but promising crowd of about 35.

Three New Coaches

Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa were led by new coaches but all of them were well known in the Big Ten football world. Up at Minnesota, Bernie Bierman, former coach of Tulane's great Green Wave and a former Gopher star, took over the reins dropped by Fritz Crisler, now head coach at Princeton; Ossie Solem, who piloted Drake to its greatest football years, succeeded Bert Ingwersen at Iowa and Dr. Clarence A. Spears, who left Minnesota for Oregon, was back in the conference. Calling the newspaper boys of Glen Thistedthwaite, Of the trio of newcomers, Bierman was expected to make the most auspicious debut with a team of great potential power. Wisconsin and Iowa seemed labeled for second division, along with Illinois and Indiana.

Coach Stagg, a more picturesque figure than ever at 71, probably was the big puzzle man of the conference. Rumors were out that his forty-first team, despite its lack of numbers would be one of his very best. He had several new scoring innovations, up his sleeve and planned to shatter all Staggian tradition by naming his first team today. Even the familiar maroon jersey, worn by the Chicago players since 1895, was discarded for white shirts and two maroon stripes on the arms.

Hooks and Slides

By WILLIAM BRAUCHER

The melancholy days are here, the saddest of the year for many of our country's leading coaches. The ranks of the college gridiron heroes have been sadly depleted by that calamity of calamities, graduation.

The publicity department of the larger schools are sitting up nights thinking of new ways to groan on paper.

"We lost that stellar performer for three seasons, Joe Whoozis," they write, and Coach Hemingway, looking over the replacements wears a worried look."

DOWNFALL OF McSLUG—

Then there is that ogre of scholastic failure. That man-eating halfback, Rip McSlug, quizzed as to the color of blue velvet, declared the stuff green, and that let good old Rip out.

This year the depression is added to the crushing burden loaded upon the mentor's sagging shoulders. Two or three young gladiators, from the Freshman class, counted upon as sure-fire stars, will be unable to return to good old Siwash because Papa lost his roll.

SUTHERLAND WEEPS—

Perhaps the championship should go to Jock Sutherland. Calling the newspaper boys around him in Pittsburgh the other day, he broke down and confessed that Pitt simply is all shot.

"If we win any big game this year we'll be lucky," he cried out in anguished accents. Then he went into the agonizing details, one by one.

To begin with the schedule was grounds for suicide. Imagine one team playing Ohio State Northwestern, West Virginia, Duquesne, Army, Notre Dame, Penn. Nebraska, Carnegie Tech and Stanford. Enough work for two seasons right there, all packed into ten weird weeks!

"And what am I going to do about a line?" he asked the palpitating correspondents. "All I've got is a center, Joe Tormey. If you can tell me the names of the other six men in the forward wall, I'll turn over my season's pay and go back to the dentist's business for the rest of my life."

BUT WAIT—

There is one way out for the harassed coach, however. Let him go to the coach of some rival eleven on the schedule and he will learn that the team is pretty good, after all.

Thus Harvey Harman, who is doing the moaning at Penn this year, begs to point out that Captain Reider of Pitt and another man named Heller, coached also by Jock Sutherland, form a passing combination better than any in the country. Harman goes so far as to say the Pitt backs are better than any two backs Notre Dame has had on the same team for years.

Probably by querying Dana Bible, at Nebraska; Major Sasse,

Somebody the fans felt would give them a square shake."

DOING HIS STUFF—

It was almost time for his act. Out on the stage pictures from some of his great fights were being run. Dempsey walked nervously back and forth in the wings. He did a little shadow-boxing.

The act consisted of a few cracks William Harrison Dempsey made with a stooge sports writer from a rural newspaper. The jokes were only fair. There was a jovial reference to "the long count" that the audience seemed to like, and another jibe directed at Jack Sharkey that was applauded.

Some slapstick was provided by Dempsey giving the stooge a playful slap on the back that floored the man.

And so back to the pinocchio game—and the entertainment of more visitors. They still crowd the doors to see the Old Mauler and shake his hand.

Much of the attraction of Dempsey's personality is built up on friendships the old boy refuses to forget. Many of them are expensive loyalties. Dempsey is one of the most "touched" men in public life.

Down and out characters he used to know "in the days when" continually are coming to him for aid.

MEETING THE GIRLS—

Then, also among his visitors are the ladies. In almost every city, Jack must arrange his daily schedule so that he can give them an audience and answer their questions.

"Most of the girls I talk to," said Jack, "want me to fight again."

Would he?

"Well, let's not go into that right now," was his parting word.

M'CARTHY HAS RESPECT FOR CUB PITCHERS

And He Calls Charley Grimm "One Of The Sweetest Leaders"

By PAUL MICKELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago, Sept. 15—(AP)—Joe McCarthy's famous grin has widened an inch since his Yankees nailed down that American League pennant but his world series voice has choked to a cautious whisper.

Not even his exultant players, already shouting about four straight victories over the Cubs, can ignite a spark of outspoken optimism from "Marse Joe."

He's been to the world series wars before as commander of the National League entry, and knows only too well what can happen to the proudest ball club in just a few riotous innings.

"Any one who says or thinks that we are a cinch to win the world series doesn't know what he's talking about and I'm not just telling bear stories," the square-jawed leader of the Ruppert rifle squad said seriously as he watched his team in a meaningless game against the downtrodden White Sox at Comiskey Park. "Sure, we do have an edge in hitting but did you ever hear of a great hitting team losing a lot of ball games? Don't fool yourself. Pitching will be the series as well as all the others. I've got a lot of respect for those Cub pitchers and for one of the sweetest leaders in the game, Charlie Grimm."

SOCIALISTS IN M. E. CHURCH TO CARRY ON FIGHT

Demand Recognition In Illinois Confer- ence At Capital

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 15—(AP)—Socialists in the Methodist clergy planned to carry their political campaign before the 109th Illinois Conference of the church today.

They said they had decided on this move because of strength developed at a dinner last night addressed by their candidate for Governor, the Rev. Roy E. Burt of Chicago. It encouraged them to seek endorsement of Burt, whose views on prohibition coincide with the dry stand of Methodism.

One hundred ministers and lay representatives attended the Christian Social Action dinner, arranged as part of the conference program. It was the culmination in Illinois of a movement started in Chicago last spring by 80 Methodist preachers from several states. Only one other such gathering had been held meanwhile in the state—at Pontiac last Aug. 1.

Support Thomas
Many "Norman Thomas" buttons were displayed with their legend of "Vote Socialist," but leaders said their principal purpose was to find a "Christian approach" to social and economic problems of the day, not merely to elect Thomas President of the United States.

At the end of the Rev. C. P. McClelland of Jacksonville, chairman of the conference committee on Church and World Order, invited the group to draw up a resolution on Burt's candidacy and give it to the Rev. S. P. Archer of Beardstown, chairman of the conference committee on Committees, expressed his approval of the meeting.

The Rev. Douglas Anderson of Illinois told the group their support would "cost them nothing in dollars but may cost them something else."

One young minister from Scott county said payment of his salary had been held up for four months because of his Socialist views.

Burt, a short, bald man of about 40, an official of the Epworth League, said he was speaking "not as a candidate for governor."

Foresees Tragedies
"I foresee tragedies of the economic depression. First, that we won't be aware of the changes taking place in the social and economic order and, second, that the Methodist church will not make its contributions to the times when it can help."

"The world we live in repudiates everything Christ stood for. Morality is threatened by bad times which deny youth a chance to marry, yet the church is trying to teach morality."

Burt described methods of unemployment relief as "stupid and blind in forcing the unemployed to give up all equities in insurance and property before distributing relief to them."

"Is it any wonder," he asked, "that we are suspected of seeking only to perpetuate the church when we haven't yet forced the legislature to adopt even a child labor amendment? It would mean loss of some endorsements or properties. Maybe if some of our churches were sold at Sheriff's sales we would have more sympathy."

OREGON MOURNS EX-POSTMASTER; RITES TOMORROW

o'clock last night, McCormick was in the kitchen preparing the noon meal which Mr. Kauffman had asked to be served at 1:15. On hearing the shot, he said, he rushed into the room to find Mr. Kauffman seated in his chair, the gun beside him.

"I've tried to kill myself," were Mr. Kauffman's only words until Dr. Lambertus Warmolts arrived. Then he told the doctor that he would better have studied anatomy, since he didn't seem to know where his heart was located.

Friend With Him
Tom Seyter, an old friend of the family, was summoned and was with Mr. Kauffman when he died.

Starting on a career which was destined to be brilliant, Mr. Kauffman was stricken with a strange malady never completely diagnosed by physicians and was confined either to a wheel-chair or bed for more than a decade.

Through the magnetism of his personality, he drew about him through these years a wide circle of friends and kept interest in life despite his handicap. His garden, which he planned and watched as it grew, his books, and a close bond of correspondence with his friends were a constant source of pleasure to him.

Wanted Full Life
"I made up my mind to live as full a life as possible—as long as I live," he once told a close friend and related, in a rare moment of talk about himself, how years ago he had "had it out" with himself in an all-night taxicab ride after doctors had told him he could never get well.

It was when the last hope of recovery had faded that he turned to a new life with the vigor of an adventurer embarking on a new and uncharted sea. Through his writing, both of letters and contributed magazine articles, and through his friends, who came almost daily to his room, he drew all of his interests within the space of four walls. Keen of wit, sharp of retort, he was a brilliant conversationalist, and a fascinating companion to the day of his death.

His friends were drawn from the ranks of distinguished writers, politicians, and business leaders the world over.

Prepared for Death
Mr. Kauffman planned for his death, carefully and with no bitterness, when it should occur. Two years ago, he wrote simple instructions for his funeral and had his secretary place them in a drawer.

Born in Mt. Morris
Harlan B. Kauffman was born in Mount Morris in 1891 and moved to Oregon in 1897. He was graduated from the Oregon high school in 1908 and after attending Lehigh University in Lehigh, Pa., he came to California in 1912.

He homesteaded in Idaho in 1913 and did newspaper and magazine work in 1914. During that time he conducted a newspaper column, and he was also an instructor for a time at Mount Morris college.

He enlisted in the infantry during the world war and was stationed at Camp Lee and Wadsworth and served overseas in the Aronne offensive and in the Army of Occupation after the war, during which time he was a member of the educational staff in Germany. He attended Law Temple in London in the spring of 1919 and resumed his law practice in Oregon in September of the same year, after his return to this country.

He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity and the University Club of Chicago, and he was a 32nd degree Mason.

He was elected to the state legislature in 1921 and sponsored the bill making Armistice day a legal holiday in Illinois.

There are no surviving relatives. His mother, Mrs. Rebekah Kauffman, distinguished as a civic leader, author and historian died several years ago, and since that time Mr. Kauffman had lived alone in his home, there, attended by a nurse.

Retires As Postmaster
Mr. Kauffman resigned his position as postmaster there on Aug. 15, his assistant, Mrs. Myra Cox, being named postmistress to fill out his unexpired term.

A coroner's jury, impanelled last night by Coroner J. C. Aikens returned a verdict of death by self-inflicted bullet wounds.

CASH PAYMENT OF BONUS WILL BE DEADLY BLOW

—PRESIDENT HOOVER

The Welfare Of All More Important Than Fav- ors To A Group

Washington, Sept. 15—(AP)—In President Hoover's opinion, immediate cash payment of the bonus who has completed his season of would "be a deadly blow at the welfare of the nation."

"I have consistently opposed it," Mr. Hoover said yesterday. "In the public interest I must continue to oppose it."

He gave his position in a statement to the press which he said was "due to the country and to the veterans." It was directed at the American Legion convention in Portland, Oregon, and was issued after the convention legislative committee had recommended adoption of a resolution favoring full and immediate payment of adjusted service certificates.

"The welfare of the nation as a whole must take precedence over the demands of any particular group," the President said.

"I have the duty not alone to see that justice and a sympathetic attitude is taken by this nation toward the 4,000,000 veterans and their families, but also to exert myself for justice to the other 21,000,000 families to whom consummation of this proposal at this time would be a calamity."

"Cash payment of face value of certificates today would require an appropriation from the Treasury of about $2,300,000,000. No matter how or in what form the payment to the veterans is imposed it will come out of all these families but of more importance, it will indefinitely set back any hope of recovery for employment, agriculture and business and will oppose infinite distress up on the whole country x x x."

"Let us not forget that while we have lost much in this depression, we still have much more to lose. And our whole future may be said to depend upon early recovery. x x x The proposal to levy over $2,000,000,000 and to pay it to a particular group constitutes a fatal threat to the entire program of recovery, to the success of which all must look for their well-being, security and happiness."

Germans Hail New "Iron Chancellor"

Germany was on the eve of a return to political turmoil when this picture was taken, showing "Iron Chancellor" von Papen, waving his hat to cheering throngs as he arrived at Tempelhof Aerodrome, Berlin, to review a gigantic demonstration by 150,000 members of the German "Steel Helmet" organization. Chancellor von Papen later stirred the country by issuing a decree dissolving the Reichstag.

San Francisco—San Francisco Bay Airline, serving three air lines, reports a sixty per cent increase in air passenger traffic for July, 1932, over the same month of 1931. About 4495 planes used the airport and carried over 11,000 passengers during the month.

DOESN'T HARM BABIES

Chicago—Flying at heights of from 10,000 to 12,000 feet does no harm to infants, an air line here has found. Medical advice it received shows that such altitudes have no detrimental effect on babies, and the only precaution to take is to have the children swallow oxygen on the descent to equalize the pressure on the middle ear with that of the outside pressure.

ROOSEVELT IS ENROUTE WEST: GARNER LEAVES

Democratic Candidate For President Due In Denver Today

Aboard Roosevelt Special, Sept. 15—(AP)—With his "farm speech"—the longest of his major talks so far—behind him, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt rode on into the west today, out of the prairie lands and up into the Rocky Mountains. He left Topeka shortly after last midnight.

Ten thousand men and women—whose number was estimated by National Guard officers serving as his escort—stood for an hour and twenty minutes in a burning noonday sun in the Kansas Capital yesterday and listened while the Democratic presidential candidate told them, from the steps of the Capitol building, what he proposes to do for farm relief should he be elected.

Thousands more shouted their greetings as he rode out to the Kansas Free Fair with his running mate, Speaker John N. Garner, who announced he had come "to show you that I wear neither horns nor hoofs though I come Texas," and with Harry H. Woodring, the Democratic Governor of Kansas.

Governor Roosevelt then wound up the day with a series of conferences with party leaders from Missouri, Iowa, Oklahoma, Texas, Nebraska and Kansas. There was an almost continuous parade of them through the late afternoon and evening in and out of Governor Woodring's home, where they met their candidates for President and Vice President.

Last night the Governor of New York and the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives parted company, Garner continuing his journey to St. Louis and Roosevelt heading toward Denver where, after stops at Colby and Goodland, in northwest Kansas, he was to arrive at 2 P. M. (Mountain Standard Time.)

Alexander von Humboldt, in South America at the beginning of the 19th century, saw live fish hurled from the mouth of a volcano along with boiling water. Apparently the fish were blown out of the subterranean channel that was opened up by the force of the eruption. Excavations of the ancient Peruvian cities have shown that many of the Inca skull operations were successful. Skulls have been found where the openings made by the unskilled surgeons were covered over with new growths of bone. It is remarkable that any patient ever survived when one considers the crude tools in use at that time.

Who was Who?

By LOUISE M. COMSTOCK

CAMILLE

THE Camille of fiction was a heroine as well as a dangerous woman, and her lingering death of broken heart as well as human frailty has still its romantic appeal to readers and theater goers. But the real Camille was merely dangerous, and the fragrant immortality she enjoys today she owes entirely to her talented lover, Alexander Dumas, fils, who allowed her to break his heart but later used her to mend his fortunes by putting her into his famous and profitable book "La Dame aux Camellias."

Marie Duplessis possessed an unusual beauty and an inordinate ambition. Raised in a family of drunk peasants, disgraced and abandoned at the age of fourteen on the streets of Paris, she became two years later the protégée of the Duke de Guiche and the pampered toast of the smart set.

It was her ambition to become an actress. So she captivated young Dumas, whose father, the famous novelist, was also a playwright and a power in the theater. Eventually, she disappointed in her ambition, she quarreled with Dumas and soon after was planning an idyllic life in Constantinople with the musician Gizst. But Marie had been prodigal of youth and strength and died before the trip could be realized. At the news Dumas rushed back to Paris from his refuge in Spain and proceeded to pay off a huge debt by the sale of his Camille, through which Marie Duplessis at last achieved at the hands of her scorned lover the warm glow of a perpetual spotlight.

Camel Compels Tribute

From Desert Traveler

Unlovely, striking, ill-natured brutes are camels, but withal the finest pack animals in the world, and the only one capable of surviving in a wilderness of thorn bush, sand and relentless sun.

You never come to feel the slightest affection for a camel. But a hard trip through a difficult country, a country that would kill a beautiful horse in a week and a tough mule in two, you are astonished to find your camels thriving, actually putting on flesh on a diet of thorns in heat almost unbearable to a white man.

You watch them curiously at their slow, unhurried pace, carrying their 350 pounds, never stumbling, never shying and never showing the slightest need for that precious commodity, water. And at the finish of the trip you feel like taking off your sun helmet every time you meet a camel.—James E. Baumj in Atlantic Monthly.

The Peony in Medicine

A pharmacist, whose fussy solitude for peonies stirs the gardener in our make-up, told us that, once upon a time, all doctors were called peonists. The plants they used as medicine were called peonies. It's all because the peony was the first medicinal plant known. The Greeks, he went on, had a high regard for the common garden variety of peony as an antispasmodic. Mongolians, to this day, have a kitchen habit of using the root of the white peony in their soups; grind the seeds to mix with their tea—an older observation muffed by the lady of "The Good Earth." Modern physicians don't think much of the peony's medicinal properties, are content to let it serve as a memorial flower.—Indianapolis News.

WORLD WAR

BY "YARNS"

LIEUT. FRANK E. HAGAN

Superhuman

Discussion has flourished on many martial topics since the war, particularly on the subject of the caliber and character of men who were selected to lead the American troops. Recently a group of Chicago veterans were fighting the war all over again and the topic veered to the proposition of whether the mentality of the West Point officer differed essentially from that of the civilian. A former lieutenant maintained it did.

This man was at an artillery training camp when a new major was sent to the outfit. The lieutenant met the major downtown the night before the latter reported for duty. They had considerable in common and the encounter developed into quite a festive affair.

In the wee small hours the major and the lieutenant returned to barracks, fast friends. Three or four hours later the lieutenant was summoned to headquarters. There he was given the opportunity to explain why he was absent from reveille.

He appeared before a major who was as spruce and alert as if just arrived from a rest cure. The lieutenant, recognizing the bon vivant of the night before, essayed a feeble smile, but got no return smile.

The major lectured him severely on keeping late hours, and confined him to quarters. "And a man who would do that," mumbled the ex-lieutenant as he told the story, "can scarcely be human."

High Lighthouse

On a tiny island, Lehua, in the Hawaiian group, the government has the highest lighthouse service. It is on top of a high rock and stands 707 feet above the Pacific ocean. Because it is difficult to climb the rock, the light, which shows ten flashes a minute, is capable of burning a whole year without attention. Twice a year it is visited by a lighthouse tender for installation of new tanks of gas.

Ordinarily lighthouses are made to stand 100 or 200 feet above sea level, so they will not be obscured by low-lying fogs. But in Hawaii, where the trade winds cross, fog is a rarity.—Capper's Weekly.

Nothing but Contacts

We arise in the morning, contact a cake of soap briefly, a shaving brush more extensively. We contact a pair of eggs, a street car conductor, and finally the office. There is an unpleasant contact with a bill collector. He says he must contact some money. Later, perhaps, we contact a customer or two. When the shades of night have contacted the earth, we contact dinner, and pass the evening contacting poor bridge hands.

And so to bed. Our fathers had all these experiences, but they didn't know how to describe them.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

STAN BALL, an agent for cattle interests, faces ASPER DELO in his office in the city. Asper is accused by the cattle men of inflicting on their range with his timber cutting. Ball accuses DeLo of having men shot who try to check up on him. Ball says he is going up to make a check himself. DeLo retorts that he will personally see that Ball does not. Standing before the office building, Stan Ball sees kidnappers slip a girl into a car. He catches the car and saves DONA DELO, Asper's daughter. When he learns who she is he slips away after telling her he is STANLEY BLACK.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II

DUDLEY WINTERS tapped the cork tip of his cigarette on the arm of his chair and smiled. He had just delivered himself of an order and he was expecting it to be taken with some weight. The person to whom this mandate had been directed was curled up in a deep chair, gazing meditatively out the nearest window.

"Don't be antique, Dud! Engaged men don't rush around telling their fiancées what to do in this age," Dona DeLo turned impatiently and pursed her lips in a most tantalizing manner.

Winters arose and strode across the room. He bent over the easy chair and scowled at its occupant in a mock fit of anger. "Want me to drag you out of that chair by your hair, woman?" He bent over and tried to steal a kiss but Dona evaded his lips and pushed him aside.

"Pull your cave in after you," she retorted. "I have things on my mind."

Dudley straightened and a defiant frown clouded his handsome face. His mouth drooped a little at the corners when he frowned and Dona fancied he could readily pout.

"You're thinking about that wash-out, Black, when you should be listening to me," Dudley could not help but speak the thoughts in his mind. "The way he vanished shows what he thinks of you."

Dona uncurred and let her little heels click on the floor. "He certainly took a great deal of pains not to make himself unpleasant." Her eyes showed that she had not liked that remark of Dudley's.

Sensing a quarrel, the young man grinned and changed his tactics. After all, why worry about this fellow Black? He was plainly a one-day visitor to the city and already punching cows back in the hills hundreds of miles away. He drew Dona down among the cushions and pinched her arm. "Mr. Black is a true knight and I shall thank him for saving you when you find him."

"Dad will locate him when he gets back," Dona flashed moodily.

"Your Dad must be out for big game on this trip," Dudley said, seating himself upon the arm of her chair. He sent a thin spiral of smoke ceilingward before he continued. "He had his rifle and one of those portable cannons commonly known as six guns out on his desk and all oiled up."

THE girl stirred and straightened. This was news to her. She had been so busy checking up on the whereabouts of a certain Stanley Black that she had forgotten all about her father's trip to Three Rivers. "Guns!" she echoed.

"Sure. A young arsenal and whole pile of cartridges. He had all the accessories, too. A sleeping bag and a pile of regular western paraphernalia." Dudley was glad he had struck upon a topic that had no fire in it.

"Where did you see him?" Dona demanded uneasily.

"I stepped in upon him at the office when I was looking for you. He told me all about the man hunt you're on."

Dona looked at Dudley appraisingly. She saw a slender young man of athletic type. Square shoulders, fine head and dark eyes that held a lurking flicker of amusement. Then she saw the mouth with its tendency to droop a bit at the corners. Dudley Winters was plainly capable but not accustomed to being called upon for any kind of action demanding effort.

"Why don't you go up to Three Rivers and talk Dad out of this wild idea, whatever it is?" Dudley grinned and inhaled deeply. He let the smoke trickle out of his mouth before he answered.

"Aw, D, he'll make it by himself. I never shot a bear in my life."

"But he's not after bear. He's after a man," Dona spoke earnestly. "You could talk him into coming back, giving up the whole thing."

"A man?" Dudley halted the spiral of smoke abruptly. "You're crazy, D."

"You don't know Dad! He comes from a family of hard fighters. Honestly, Dad, this is serious." Dona Black that she had forgotten all about her father's trip to Three Rivers.

"Can't you see we must do something to stop him?"

"Sure. A young arsenal and whole pile of cartridges. He had all the accessories, too. A sleeping bag and a pile of regular western paraphernalia." Dudley was glad he had struck upon a topic that had no fire in it.

been lurking in the back of her mind. "Your answer first, my little lady." He caught and held her tightly.

"Whatever you ask, but you must get father to give up this wild idea of shooting someone." Playfully she shoved him away as he tried to gather her slender shoulders in a close embrace. "Your reward, Sir Knight, must wait upon your success."

Dudley shook her lightly and released her. "You are a hard taskmaster, Princess." He bowed with a wide sweep of his arm. "But your knight rides forth at dawn to do your bidding."

"At dawn and in my roadster. I am going to Three Rivers with you, sir."

"No you don't! This may be a case of hog-tying your fond parent and shipping him back by express. This is a man's job and I refuse to allow the future Mrs. Winters to be involved in it. You will sit right here and await the boy from the telegraph office. Once every hour or often he will deliver a report on the progress at Three Rivers."

STANDING before her in his faultlessly tailored suit, his hair combed back smoothly and his tie knotted with careless perfection, Dudley Winters looked more capable of braving the dangers of a bridge party among dowagers than embarking upon a dangerous and rough mission.

"Just the same I'm going. I'll stay at the company hotel and be perfectly safe and I may be able to help. Don't you want me where you can see me every day?" She arose and moved nearer with her face upturned.

"You go, lady," Dudley grinned. Secretly he was glad she was going. If she stayed she might locate this stranger, Black, and that was far from his desire. He was a little nervous and a great deal jealous of the dashing cowboy who had rescued Dona. Of course it had been his own luck to be playing golf at the precise hour when she had been kidnapped and the luck of a stranger to be standing on the sidewalk to see what happened.

"You'd better toddle home now and get ready. We'll have to start early." Dona patted his cheek and escaped before he could catch her.

"This is one morning when I'll have something to get up for," Dudley smiled as he moved toward the door. After picking up his hat from the chair into which he had tossed it he faced her. "It would be fitting and proper for me to search until I find a murderous weapon like the one your Dad was killing. I suppose." He grinned as he slid his hat firmly over his smooth hair.

"It would not. You are to prevent shooting—not to help or do anything else." Dona spoke severely and earnestly.

"No danger of me shooting anyone! I'm no plainman. Gunning is out of my line. If there is any tough stuff I'll have to use my fists or a club." He opened the hall door. "Got one for a good night?"

Dona slipped forward and placed a swift kiss on his lips, then turned to the stairs and ran up to her room. Dudley Winters walked down the white stone steps of the DeLo town house as though the hard slabs had been cushioned with air. He poked the sleeping chauffeur in the car at the curb and shouted happily, "Step on her Tom! We're headed home."

When H. G. Wells was attending luncheon at the Dutch Treat club in New York some time ago, along with Conrad Massaguer, the Cuban caricaturist, the latter was entertaining the others with swift thumbnail sketches and merry patter. Speaking of his family Massaguer said:

"My people live in Havana. Eleven of my relatives are in jail there now."

Whereupon Mr. Wells, who was sitting on the other side of the table and had been taking no part in the conversation, pricked up his ears and said:

"Oh, I say! How does one go about getting one's relatives in jail?"—Collier's Weekly.

House Ventilation

While air-conditioning, with its present application in home construction, only recently has become a part of the general public consciousness, its beginnings may be traced back to the earliest dwellers in caves, tents and primitive shelters, who dug holes in walls and roofs to supply ventilation, says an authority. He opines that as civilization advanced, "the first recognition of the need of fresh air came from the necessity of securing a supply of fresh air in mines." Henceforth, he says, attention was given to the necessity of ventilation independent of heating.

Sidelights In News In Capital
Of United States

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington — A little incident entirely off the program took place on Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's unprecedented campaign visit to Vermont.

It was when he approached Bennington, the last port of call on the trip. The Governor and his party were traveling by a back road which led them through the campus of a women's college.

They came to a gate which was locked. All efforts to open it failed. A trooper, serving as an escort, quickly pulled his pistol and shot three bullets into the lock, breaking it. Then the Governor and his party proceeded through the college grounds.

Thus did the Democratic nominee "shoot his way" into a traditionally rock-ribbed Republican stronghold.

BREAKING PRECEDENTS

Roosevelt broke precedents and more that day in Vermont.

The audacity of the Democratic nominee's invasion of the Green Mountain state—the first ever to do such a thing—apparently intrigued him. He referred to it repeatedly whenever he stopped to speak to the crowds gathered here and there.

Just what he accomplished by the trip, of course, only can be determined on November 8. While he said enthusiastically that now or never again in the future would he concede Vermont's electoral vote to the Republicans, the state leaders did not go quite that far.

The national committeeman said he thought Roosevelt would get the biggest vote ever given a Democratic nominee. Another conceded that he had a fifty-fifty chance.

CHEERS THE DEMOCRATS—

But regardless of whether his visits results in the capture of Vermont in November, it probably was worthwhile if for no other reason than it cheered the Democrats there. A Vermont Democrat more or less is accustomed to defeat.

Roosevelt's appearance in their midst perhaps had the effect of dispelling to some degree that sense of futility that by this time most of them must feel.

WEEKLY SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Faith and Courage

By WILLIAM GILROY D. D.

If Moses believed in the Lord's call of himself and in the Lord's leadership of his people, he believed, none the less, in human agency and in the need of doing everything humanely possible to make secure his mission and the goal of attainment for his people.

Hence, instead of marching boldly into the Promised Land, trusting to providence to sustain him, he took the precautionary measure of spying out the land, discovering the problem before him and the conditions that might make for success.

The results, however, were not entirely satisfactory, for the armed judgment with which men estimate even practical situations was manifested in a divided verdict of the spies as they returned.

The majority report was unfavorable, emphasizing the difficulties of conquest in the strength of the enemy and the wealth and resources of their country.

Only two of the 12 spies gave a favorable answer, and these took the view that the children of Israel should go at once and possess the land and that they were well able to conquer it. Caleb was the chief spokesman for this report based upon hope and faith, and Joshua was his associate in urging the people to go forward.

What was the difference between the viewpoints and vision of the 10 and the two, occasioning such divergent reports? They were all agreed, apparently, about the desirableness of the country. It was a land flowing with milk and honey. But there was a very different way of appreciating and estimating the human elements.

The 10 spies who advised against attack were impressed with the size and power of the inhabitants, and at the same time they apparently were ready to underestimate the strength and capacity of the Israelites. Caleb and Joshua, however, were not appalled by the size of the San-eanites. They knew that power is not all a matter of size, but that it is also a matter of spirit and courage. They did not estimate things merely on a basis of numbers and apparent resources.

It is not easy to put ourselves back into an ancient day and enter-very heartily into the spirit of a conflict involving the driving of certain people from their country and homes that other people might occupy them. There is a flavor of might making right about the militaristic side of the matter, and there is no particular need that we should stress the lesson from that angle.

The real lessons lie deeper, and are found in the symbolism of the conflicting reports — the one based almost entirely on materialistic conditions and superficial observation, the other based upon deeper considerations of courage and boldness in action.

The saying that "God is on the side of the great battalions" is attributed to Napoleon; but Napoleon himself lived to see the overthrow of the military strength in which he trusted. It is interesting also, to remember that the overwhelming defeat of Napoleon at Waterloo was occasioned partially through the riding of the flower of his army into a great ditch, which careful reconnaissance of the ground of battle might have prevented.

Small things have often made for great defeats and great victories. Caleb and Joshua apparently took that fully into account, and they had deep confidence in small things called "faith and courage."

BULGARIANS DEFEATED

On Sept. 15, 1918, French and Serbian troops broke through the Bulgarian line of defenses in the Balkan peninsula and advanced rapidly into the second line of defenses.

The situation of the Bulgarian army was critical at the end of the day's fighting, a gap having been made between the First and Second Army groups.

American troops on the newly won front north of St. Mihiel continued to improve their positions and spent most of the day in a series of local attacks, designed to strengthen their positions.

British and French forces pressed forward in Picardy, making important, though slight, gains.
